The Right To Choose

Most Americans accept the concept that a worker should have the right to a job if one is available and he is competent to handle it. Yet, one of the most bitter and endless labor-management battles is constantly being waged in contradiction of this right. Reference is to so-called "right-to-work" laws, which are in effect in some states. Oklahoma has rejected the "right-to-work" thesis in at least one statewide election.

But regardless of whether one favors or opposes right to work, information in U. S. Labor Department records indicates generally more open job climate in right-to-work states than in those where the union or closed shop contracts are the pattern. Here are some significant Labor Department figures on the matter:

The past 10 years has seen new manufacturing jobs in right-to-work states increase by 45.3 per cent as compared with 15 per cent in non right-to-work states. Expenditures for new plant and equipment in the same states rose 158 per cent against 116 per cent in controlled areas. Per capita income climbed 77.3 per cent as against 67.9 per cent, and unemployment ranged from 3.4 per cent in the former to 3.8 per cent in the latter.

The argument is made by Reed Larson, executive vice-president of the National Right-To-Work Committee, that the elimination of compulsory union membership "insures greater union responsibility at the bargaining table." It is a conclusion that is subject to question, but cannot be ignored.

In principle, right-to-work laws tend to preserve the right of a worker to hold a job, whether or not he joins a union. This, too, is challenged by organized labor. Not under challenge, however, is the moral justice of protecting a man's right to hold a job without paying a form of tribute for the privilege. —Tulsa (Okla.) World

Right to Hearing Denied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has refused to give young men registering for the draft the right to a lawyer and a courtroom-style hearing before their local draft boards.

By a vote of 44 to 32, it rejected Thursday an amendment by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., to add those procedural guarantees to a registrant's right of a personal appearance at his board.

The Senate also defeated efforts of volunteer-army supporters to shorten the pending two-year draft extension to 20 months and to require institution of incentives designed to attract more voluntary enlistments.

With a large pile of amendments pending, including three scheduled for votes today, Senate leaders made it definite they will move Monday to cut off the debate, which Thursday entered its seventh week.

Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said he, Republican Leader Hugh Scott and Sen. John O. Stennis, D-Miss., will present Monday a petition to end debate.

That means the Senate will vote Wednesday whether to limit each senator to one hour on the bill and all remaining amendments. A two-thirds vote is required and Mansfield said if the effort falls short Wednesday, a new attempt will be made two days later.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif. said he will join efforts by Sens. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, and Mark O. Hatfield, D-Ore., to keep the debate going and seek to cut off men for the war by preventing extension of the draft by the June 30 expiration.

There are prospects the Senate might get two more chances next week to impose a deadline on U.S. operations in Indochina.

Sky Marshals Force May Be Cut

By VERN HAUGLAND

AP Aviation Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite a new rash of air piracy and the first slaying of a passenger on a hijacked plane, the chief of U.S. sky marshals says his force may be cut late next year.

Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, director of civil aviation security, says a 75 per cent trimming of his 1,200-man force is foreseeable if airport ground security continues to improve.

"It is likely that we will always have to have sky marshals to prevent air crimes," Davis said in an interview. "But I would think there would be about one-fourth the number we have now."

Davis, a retired Air Force lieutenant general, said displaced marshals could go to other government security jobs. Putting armed marshals aboard planes is a hazard and unpopular with the government, airlines and passengers, but essential for the time being, Davis said.

He called "shocking, extremely disturbing" the fatal shooting of a 65-year-old Connecticut businessman aboard a hijacked Trans World Airlines jetliner at Chicago's O'Hare Field last Friday.

"Nevertheless, the solution toward which we are all pushing remains, and it is complete security on the ground—keeping dangerous person off aircraft," Davis said.

Citing an example of ground security efforts, Davis said one major airline has spent $750,000 to buy enough weapon-detection devices to cover every boarding gates at every airport it serves.

At a closed May 25 meeting of the American Association of Airport Executives, he outlined these previously undisclosed security slips at different major airports:

—Two teenagers running away from home walked aboard a parked jet airliner with plans to stow away, and were found asleep there.

—An insurance investigator testing the effectiveness of cargo security measures climbed aboard a parked Boeing 747 jumbo jet, wandered about and took pictures without being challenged.

—Drunks rummaged through three parked 727s looking for liquor.

—A security survey of an important airport in March disclosed instances of motorists lost on runways at night and of horseback riders, hunters, sightseers and cyclists on restricted airport roads.

"There are a great number of airports in this country where people and vehicles have open access to runways, taxiways and ramps," Davis said. "We are not going to close any airports, but we do want airports to stop being public parks."

State Measles Rate Alarming

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Arkansas Health Department says in its latest report that the incidence of rubella (Measles) in the state has increased at an alarming rate.

The department said, in its May report, that there had been 706 cases reported in 1971, compared to 180 in 1970. The five-year average of rubella cases was reported to be 54.

There were 300 cases reported in April and 62 in May.

New Welfare System May Pass

WASHINGTON (AP) — Backers of a sweeping new federal welfare system predict the House will approve it next week, despite opposition massing across party and ideological lines.

House leaders have accepted this assessment and decided against further delay. Debate is set to begin Monday, with the vote expected Tuesday.

The legislation is based on President Nixon's year-old recommendation for scrapping the federal-state welfare system in favor of a federal program involving an assured income of $2,400 a year for a family of four.

States providing a higher level of support could continue to do so at their own expense. They would be protected, however, against spending more than they did this year despite increases in the number of eligible persons.

Over-all, federalization of the system is expected to save the states $1.6 billion.

Welfare reform is half of an omnibus bill that also includes higher Social Security benefits and liberalization of many aspects of the Social Security system.

The original strategy was to present the measure to the House as a unit, so the popular Social Security changes would help carry the controversial welfare provisions.

However, facing a possible blockade in the Rules Committee, backers agreed to a separate vote on welfare.

Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee which developed the bill, told a reporter: "I think we're all right."

Much will depend, he said, on support Republicans give the welfare reform.

Both Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford of Michigan and Rep. John W. Byrnes of Wisconsin, senior Republican on Ways and Means, said he expects a majority of their party colleagues to vote against deleting the welfare portion of the combined bill.

Some conservatives in both parties object to the principle of an assured income and to the prospective addition of some 10 million persons to the eligible rolls, principally by inclusion of the working poor.

Examination of Records Is Blocked

By CARL C. CRAFT

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of a House panel says an "intolerable and unconscionable state of affairs" exists because federal courts blocked examination of bank records involving alleged Communists until judges decide a Senate subpoena case.

Announcing Thursday he will urge the Justice Department to press for swift action in the disputes, House Internal Security Committee Chairman Richard H. Ichord, D-Mo., said injunctions amount to "judicial interference" with a congressional panel's work.

Ichord contends House probes should not be deferred pending determination of a 1970 suit filed by the U.S. Servicemen's Fund fighting the Senate Internal Security subcommittee's demand for bank records.

Court sources say the two cases involve the same question of law.

Whether a congressional committee can subpoena from a bank records reflecting membership in an organization and concerning 1st Amendment political rights.

Ichord said federal court orders blocking committee investigators from examining deposits and expenditures of the National Peace Action Coalition and the People's Coalition for Peace and Justice are frustrating efforts to find out the source of money "for mass outpourings of radicalized activists of the left." Both coalitions sponsored recent antiwar demonstrations here.

Ichord charges U.S. Communist Party members are in PCPJ while so-called Trotskyite Communists from the Socialist Workers Party and its youth group, Young Socialist Alliance, have key roles in NPAC. Some bank information was made public before the court order.

Herron May Not Get Position

By JIM ADAMS

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's program to phase out the Indochina war has won a hands-off from Congress with rapid-fire House rejection of a Dec. 31 pullout or any other deadline.

Attempts to put the House on record for a June 1 U.S. pullout, an April 30 deadline and variations of the Dec. 31 war halt were shouted down and voted out Thursday one after the other.

The Senate had rejected 55 to 42 Wednesday the Hatfield-McGovern amendment to actually cut off funds and troops for the war Dec. 31.

All seven House end-the-war measures were rejected even after backers stressed they would only register Congress' desire for a date of a certain halt to the war—not tie the President's hands by cutting off money, troops or weapons.

The state Board of Health has nominated Herron to be director, but Bumpers has not acted on the nomination.

50-50 Chance for Lockheed in Senate

By H.L. SCHWARTZ III

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

Chances for Senate action to save Lockheed Aircraft Corp. from bankruptcy appear no better than 50-50 after two weeks of hearings on the administration's request for $250 million in federal loan guarantees.

With apparently only five, possibly six, firm votes for the legislation in the 15-member Banking Committee, there appears a possibility the bill might die there and never reach the floor for a vote.

Apparently because of this possibility, a knowledgeable committee source said Friday, the Treasury Department has been considering a suggested compromise.

Treasury Secretary John B. Connally has been masterminding the administration campaign for the Lockheed bill, drawn specifically to aid that company although it is not mentioned by name.

One reported compromise under consideration, said the committee source, is an administration bill along lines of several already before the committee. This would set up a loan-guarantee board to assist other ailing businesses whose collapse could threaten the national economy.

The report could not be confirmed and the source acknowledged that although he is certain such discussions were held, he considers it highly doubtful the administration will propose a compromise which could signal a lack of confidence in the current Lockheed proposal.

There also is a proposal before the committee to establish a national development bank along lines of the old Reconstruction Finance Corp., which, despite the taint of scandal at one point in its 20-year history, went out of existence in the 1950s with a record of success in saving many medium-size enterprises.

Lockheed says it will go bankrupt unless it obtains government-backed bank loans and is able to deliver its L1011 TriStar Airbus.

Delay in developing the plane was caused by collapse of Rolls-Royce Ltd., which is making engines for the TriStar.

Despite broad support in Congress for an RFC-type solution to problems of such major businesses as Lockheed and the Penn Central, which went into receivership a year ago, there is no assurance Congress will approve an amendment to save Lockheed.

Since it might take months to set up an RFC-type organization, and Lockheed must have help soon, such an amendment would be necessary.

Hands-Off by Congress on Pullout

Presbyterian Leaders Now Suggest Couples Limit Children to 2

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

AP Religion Writer

MASSANETTA SPRINGS, Va.

(AP) — To help curb the population explosion and spreading hunger, Southern Presbyterians recommend that young couples consider limiting their children to two.

If they want more, the Church advises, they should adopt them.

The action came Thursday night on the eve of the closing day of the million-member denomination's governing assembly.

The assembly also called the Indochina war morally unjustified but commended the administration's policy on it—a compromise which drew protests from youth delegates and others.

It "treats lightly the great hurt and deep frustration which we in this nation experience, from American involvement in Southeast Asia," the youths said in a statement.

Some of the older church representatives also signed a protest statement saying the position like the situation when the prophet Jeremiah warned "against healing lightly the wounds of the people and crying 'peace, peace' when there is no

Mills on List of Nominees

By MIKE SHANAHAN

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

With $200 in bumper stickers and a little help from his friends, Rep. James A. Burke, has put Wilbur Mills on the list of candidates for the 1972 Democratic presidential nomination.

Burke, a Boston congressman since 1958, seems at first glance an unlikely wagon-master for the campaign of Mills, powerful chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

About all they have in common are membership on Ways and Means and reputations for Democratic party regularity. Burke, a jovial Irishman who was a Chicago policeman before he moved to Boston and got into politics, has seldom surfaced from the anonymity of the House rank and file. Mills, a quiet-spoken Harvard-educated lawyer, has been a power in the House since World War II.

Arkansas' Mills disavows the candidacy and says a recent speaking tour around the country is designed solely to generate support for his opposition to President Nixon's revenue-sharing plan.

He has said that he tried to discourage the presidential talk, and discounts any suggestion he might be able to win the nomination.

"I have tried as best I can to control what my friends are doing, but I cannot," he said. Nevertheless, said Burke, the movement will continue, probably at a low key, until the Democratic convention next year.

"After Labor Day," he said, "I wouldn't be surprised to see some interested people get together to decide if there should be an organization."

Robbers Hit Bank Again

Queens bank held up exactly one week earlier and robbed of $30,000 was hit again Thursday by three gunmen.

This time an estimated $15,000 was taken, according to officials of the Reliance Federal Savings and Loan Association in Flushing.

Seven employees and six customers were in the bank when the three gunmen entered and emptied tellers' cash drawers, police reported. No injuries occurred.

A week earlier, two men, one with a shotgun, lined up five customers and seven employees, then fled in a car driven by a third man.

To Try Again for Troop Withdrawal

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

At least two new Senate attempts are likely next week to set a date for total U.S. withdrawal from Indochina and one, with no mandatory funds cutoff, may have a good chance of passing.

That amendment, sponsored by Sens. Marlow W. Cook, R-Ky., Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., and Vance Hartke, D-Ind., would cut off funds for U.S. operations in Indochina nine months after enactment, provided U.S. prisoners of war are freed.

Although basically similar to amendments defeated Wednesday 52 to 44 and 55 to 42, the backers hope to get the extra five votes needed. They already have one in Cook who voted against both earlier amendments.

If Pastore's amendment is adopted, there still remains a question of whether the House would go along.

Pastore said his amendment, though it would have no legal force, "would have a tremendous impact. It would indicate to the American people exactly how the Congress feels."

Sens. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., and Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., have introduced 20 amendments similar to their defeated proposal for a Dec. 31, 1971, funds cutoff. Each has a different end-the-war date in 1972.

All the amendments are being offered to a bill extending the draft two years.

With Sens. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, and Alan Cranston, D-Calif., threatening a filibuster to prevent passage of the draft extension by the June 30 deadline, the Senate leaders plan to present a petition Monday to limit debate.

A two-thirds vote would be required Wednesday to limit each senator to one hour of debate on the rest of the bill including all amendments. If the cutoff fails Wednesday, leaders said, a new attempt would be made Friday. Gravel claims he has enough support to keep debate going.

Wants More Flexibility of Money

By BILL NEIKIRK

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

The head of White House economic advisers says more flexibility should be built into the international monetary system to avoid a repetition of such currency crises as struck the dollar in May.

Dr. Paul W. McCracken, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, did not commit himself to any particular solution, saying only that "more adjustment capability" must be worked into the present system, in which the dollar has a fixed value in relation to other foreign currencies.

"What we have to do is find some way to have our system remain a little more orderly, or a little less susceptible to strains when domestic economies of the various nations get out of step, as they will from time to time," he said in an interview with The Associated Press.

In the recent currency upheaval, speculators rushed to unload dollars for German marks, in expectation the mark would be revalued upward.

Dollars had flowed to Europe in excessive volume because interest rates there were higher than in the United States. The rush subsided when Germany let the mark "float" to find a higher value, in terms of the dollar, in world money markets.

Serengeti National Park in Tanzania may have been disturbed by man less than any other area on earth, except for polar ice regions. The tourist brochure says that Serengeti plains contain "the greatest and most spectacular concentration of plains animals left anywhere in Africa, and indeed, in the world." No one seriously challenges the claim: scientists have counted 1.5 million large animals there, including gazelles, wildebeest, zebras, buffaloes, topis, giraffes and lions.

The park—at 5,700 square miles it's larger than the state of Connecticut—has no factories, jetports or other man made interruptions to its natural way of life. There are only the tourists, in Land Rovers or minibuses, who come to gaze through the shimmering dust and heat at nature as they've only ever seen it before in books or nature magazines.

Boswell to Run for Senate

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Ted Boswell says that he is even more interested in running for Sen. John L. McClellan's seat than he was when he revealed recently that he was considering making the race in 1972.

The 38-year-old Bryant lawyer, who narrowly missed the runoff for the Democratic nomination for governor in 1968, said his greater interest was sparked by the reaction to the news he was thinking of running.

Boswell said favorable comment had come from a cross-section of Arkansans. All of it is "positive," not anti-McClellan, he said, adding that this is the way he wanted it. He said if he runs, he will wage a positive campaign for the office and not against McClellan.

Boswell said he did not anticipate making a decision soon on whether to run. In the meantime, he said, he will try to find time off from a busy law practice to visit over the state and test public sentiment about his possible candidacy.

Boswell expects McClellan to run for another term — the senator has not announced his intentions — but declined to predict if McClellan can be beaten. Whether McClellan can be defeated is one of the factors he is weighing, Boswell said.

"I would not make the race unless I felt he could be beaten if he were a candidate," Boswell said.

Boswell said that if he seeks the office, "there must be some obvious reason why I would run against him (McClellan)."

"I differ with him on many things," Boswell said. "I differ with his philosophy, to be more specific, on many things. At the same time, I recognize many contributions that he has made to the state and to the nation as a public office holder."

He declined to state their differences at this time.

Rep. David Pryor, D-Ark., also has been mentioned as a possible candidate for McClellan's position. Pryor has not committed himself, nor has he taken himself out of the speculation.

Boswell said he could foresee a Boswell - Pryor-McClellan race, although he said he could not speculate on Pryor's plans. He said he disagreed "at least in part" with persons who claim that he and Pryor would harm each other if both were in the race against McClellan. The argument is that each would be drawing on the same voter reservoir.

"I think everyone knows by now that simply applying labels to people or categorizing them ... is a mistake in politics," Boswell said. "I think David Pryor or I either one could individually get a great many votes that the other couldn't necessarily get."

He said, however, that he would concede that many votes would be split between them.

Boswell said there had been "quite a bit of editorial comment that we should get together and decide who ought to run."

"That's not the way things are done in the Democratic primaries," he said. "I couldn't criticize or fault anyone who wants to go for a U.S. Senate seat and certainly I wouldn't feel inclined to want to talk anyone out of that sort of desire."

Boswell declined any conjecture on what political direction might be taken in 1972 by Gov. Dale Bumpers, who has been mentioned as a possible candidate for the Senate. Bumpers

Says Oil Damages Arctic

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Coast Guard researcher says routine drilling and shipping in Alaska's North Slope oil fields will pour 8,400 gallons of crude oil into the Arctic's delicate environment each day.

His estimate does not include such potential disasters as the breaking of an oil tanker. That, said Lt. (jg) J.L. Glaeser of the U.S. Coast Guard's office of research and development, could pour 25,000 tons of oil into Arctic waters.

The long-term effects of oil spills are unknown, Glaeser said. But, he added, "An oil spill on the surface of an ice field will result in greater than normal absorption of solar radiation and a resulting melting of ice."

"The most damaging results are likely to be the direct effects on birds and mammals. It has been speculated that a spill of a very large magnitude could adversely affect plankton and disrupt the food chain." Plankton is floating life in water.

Glaeser made his remarks before the 1971 conference on Prevention and Control of Oil Spills Wednesday.

By comparing oil losses from existing drilling and shipping on Cook inlet in Alaska with the expected North Slope production, Glaeser said "An average of 8,400 gallons will be discharged into the environment on a daily basis or approximately 1,000 tons per year by 1975."

"This really represents a minimum figure," he said.

Glaeser said total reserves on the North Slope of Alaska and Mackenzie Basin and Arctic Islands region of Canada may exceed 150 billion barrels.

"One need only look at the potential reserves available for development to appreciate the possible oil pollution problem in the Arctic," he said.

It also "should be expected," he said, "that eventually production will be attempted in deeper waters where drilling rigs and pipelines will be subjected to the full impact of the ice pack."

"Great hazards also are associated with shipping," he added. "Ice pack forces can be severe enough to immobilize or damage ice-breaking tankers of present design."

Glaeser said most of the oil probably would be moved through pipelines but some shipments by oil tankers were expected.

He said it is not known how the oil moves above and beneath the surface of the ice and called for more research to "define the scope of the problem" and to devise means of cleaning up spills.

has said he is leaving his options open, although he has said he really isn't thinking that far ahead.

"We sort of have a minimum two-term tradition in Arkansas (for governor) but I couldn't speculate on that," Boswell said.

In what has since been termed the "Boswell Blitz," Boswell emerged from nowhere to finish third in the 1968 Democratic gubernatorial primary. Mrs. Virginia Johnson narrowly edged him for the runoff spot against Marion Crank, the eventual party nominee.

Boswell came close to running again for governor in 1970, but took himself out of the race shortly before the filing deadline. One reason was a lack of financing, he said.

"So many people expected me to run that they took for granted that I probably was going to be well financed," Boswell said.

He also said that without adequate financing he did not want to subject his family and friends to the "physical, financial and mental ordeal" they went through during the 1968 campaign.

"I think that for anyone to understand my decision not to run, he has to remember the reasons I ran in 1968 — I wanted to change the Democratic party in Arkansas and I wanted to involve people in Democratic party politics who had previously been left out. By and large, we accomplished a great deal of this, even though I didn't win in 1968."

A PAEAN TO FATHER

Dear Helen:
Here's my thing for Father's Day:

WHAT IS A FATHER?

A father is a man with five daughters who never complains that he doesn't have a son.

He's your pet peeve and your best friend, both at the same time.

He's someone who listens to what you say, and he's always there when you need him, although sometimes you don't think so at the time. He knows the right things to say — at the wrong times.

He's a clown, a gentleman, a fix-it man, a philosopher, a mystic, a counselor, an engineer, a singer, a writer, a professional food consumer and can talk intelligently on almost anything.

He brags about everything you do which embarrasses you sometimes, but if he didn't you'd feel awfully hurt.

He compliments you on your cooking, even if he takes soda afterwards.

Right now, he's the only guy you'd want to be stranded on a desert island with, but that will change when you're a year older.

He complains about money, but still gives it to you.

He'll drive you somewhere, even though he's just worked a double shift.

When the phone rings, he'll say, "Sis, it's toy you," before anyone answers, but when you're talking, he'll groan, "You've still got that growth on you ear, huh?"

He's the one who takes us girls shopping, even though he can't stand it.

And when your friends drop over to play records or shoot pool and it's late and they're noisy, he still says it's all right, even though you know he'll grumble a little to Mom.

Sometimes he acts like a bear, but he's the type who would sacrifice anything for his family, and he even understands when you can't really understand yourself.

In other words, our Dad is the greatest, and that's the biggest understatement of the century. — E.D. AND DONNA

Good Idea for Ending Next Party

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Here's an idea for ending your next party.

Everyone gets a plastic bag and a small, glass tube containing chunks of solid chemical.

You stick the tube into the bag and blow through the tube until the bag is inflated. If you've been drinking, the chunks in the tube will change colors.

The one whose breath causes the most chunks to change colors has been drinking the heaviest.

In Charlotte and Mecklenburg County, you can get this party paraphernalia without charge from the state-owned liquor stores.

The program, administered by the Research Triangle Institute for the U.S. Department of Transportation's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration at a cost of nearly $2 million, is part of the institute's Charlotte-Mecklenburg Safety Action Project. Through it the institute hopes to come up with recommendations for an effective nationwide plan to prevent auto accidents caused by drinking drivers.

Liquor sold in Charlotte and Mecklenburg County comes in brown bags displaying charts of the mathematical chance of having a wreck per ounce of liquor consumed.

And soon the liquor stores will be giving away with each purchase a "B-4-U Drive I-Cator," a small, round scale to help drivers figure their chance of having a wreck based on the amount of liquor consumed, how long it took to drink it and body weight.

More than 65,000 of the breath-testing kits have been distributed to the liquor stores, and 100,000 slid graphs have been ordered.

Jack Miller, the project director, says that since the project is only a couple of months old, it is too early to judge its effectiveness. But he is convinced it will be more effective than a simple antiliquor campaigning.

FOOD FOR AMERICANS

Enjoy Fish in a Blanket

By AILEEN CLAIRE
NEA Food Editor

What homemaker has not been caught with a lean refrigerator when unexpected guests drop in? A quick, different and tasty meal is simple to prepare from frozen fish sticks in an enriched homestyle breading and crescent rolls. From this combination come attractive looking Fish in Blanket or Fish in Breadbasket, depending upon how the dough is folded. From canned soups mix a filling Beef and Green Pea Bouillon that children and adults will enjoy with the fish snacks.

BEEF AND GREEN PEA BOUILLON

1 can (11½ ounces) condensed pea soup

1 can (10½ ounces) condensed beef bouillon

1½ cups milk

Chopped parsley

Combine all ingredients except parsley. Beat. Heat. Garnish with parsley. Serve hot or cold.

FISH IN BLANKET OR BREADBASKET

1 package frozen crescent rolls

Melted butter

4 slices American cheese

1 (1 pound) package enriched fish sticks

Blanket: Remove crescent roll dough from package and separate into 8 triangles.

Spread out and brush with melted butter. Cut cheese slices into ½-inch strips.

Breadbasket: Remove crescent roll dough from package and separate into 8 triangles.

Use melted butter for inside of eight-cup muffin tin. Arrange dough against sides and bottom.

Let triangle points protrude over edge of muffin cup, to form handles for baskets.

Cut slightly thawed fish stick

Frozen fish sticks and crescent rolls make treat for guests.

Place one fish stick at end of triangle; place one or two strips of cheese on top and cover with another fish stick. Roll buttered dough around fish sandwich. Bake in preheated 400-degree oven for 15 minutes. Serve hot with Just Right Sauce.

Breadbasket: Remove crescent roll dough from package and separate into 8 triangles. Use melted butter for inside of eight-cup muffin tin. Arrange dough against sides and bottom. Let triangle points protrude over edge of muffin cup, to form handles for baskets. Cut slightly thawed fish stick in half. Arrange four or eight pieces in cup on top of dough. Circle with cheese strips. Place on baking sheet and bake in preheated 400-degree oven for 15 minutes. Serve with Just Right Sauce.

1 package brown gravy and sauce mix

½ cup chopped onions

½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

½ cup catsup

Prepare gravy as package label directs, using ½-cup water. Add remaining ingredients. Simmer 5 minutes.

Opening lead—♠ K

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Here is another one of those so-called, laydown hands. West makes his normal opening lead of the king of clubs and South has no trouble counting to 11 winners. He also sees that he has three plays for his 12th trick.

The first is that maybe he can ruff out the queen of clubs to set up dummy's jack. If that doesn't work he can lead a heart toward dummy and finesse the jack. If that fails he will still be able to fall back on the spade finesse.

He starts by ruffing a club at trick two. Then he plays the ace of trumps and notes that both opponents follow.

He leads a second trump to dummy's jack in order to lead a third club.

The queen does not fall so play number one has failed. You can see also that both finesses are wrong. In spite of all that South can almost claim his contract at this point. All that is necessary is that West have the queen of clubs and the opening lead has marked him with that card.

Here is the sure-thing play. South leads a heart to dummy's ace, a second one back to the king; ruffs his last heart; plays dummy's jack of clubs and discards his trey of spades.

West wins the trick and is end played. A spade lead is up to the ace-queen. A heart lead allows South to ruff in dummy and discard his queen of spades.

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB

Nervous Sweat Is Fairly Common

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — My daughter is very nervous around people and therefore perspires quite heavily. We have tried everything on the market, deodorants and antiperspirants, but nothing seems to work. Is there any medical treatment for this problem?

Dear Reader — Sweating from nervousness is fairly common. There are two types of sweat glands and there are over two million of them on the surface of the body. The common type of sweat gland produces a weak saltwater solution that has no odor. They are located everywhere on the body except the lips and part of the sex organs.

The other sweat glands are really sex glands and don't develop until puberty. There are a few of these under the arms, over the abdomen, around the thighs and buttocks region. They form a milkylike fluid with an unobjectionable odor. Orientals form very little of this material. Caucasians more and Negroes still more.

The common sweat glands produce one to three pints of sweat a day and respond to heat or nerve stimulation. More sweat is not formed under the arms, there is simply less opportunity for the sweat to evaporate as rapidly as it does elsewhere.

The odor from sweating is caused by a breakdown of products from the sex sweat gland or from bacterial action. If ordinary sweat is stored and kept free of bacteria it will remain odorless. The methods used to prevent body odor are efforts to remove the perspiration, to prevent bacterial action and to limit the amount of sweat formed.

Most deodorants or antiperspirants contain substances to prevent bacterial action and prevent secretion of sweat.

Medicine taken by mouth is usually reserved for individuals who have true excessive sweating problems. These medicines block the chemical action of the nerves to the sweat glands. They are the same medicines used to prevent the nerve stimulation of the formation of acid pepsin in the stomach.

The problem your daughter has suggests that she needs to gain confidence in herself. Sometimes this comes with time and experience to people. If it is a real problem for her, she might do well to get some psychiatric help to gain confidence. There are a lot of people who have the problem of excessive nervousness around other people. There couldn't be much better proof that people are actually afraid of people.

To Question Executive Privilege

By JIM LUTHER

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House subcommittee will investigate government information practices one congressman says "combine to censor news at the source and violate the 1st Amendment rights of free press."

Reacting to Nixon administration moves to block further publication by The New York Times of a top-secret Pentagon history of the Vietnam war, the House Foreign Operations and Government Information Subcommittee will hold hearings on executive privilege and classification procedures.

"We will call as witnesses to the hearings appropriate representatives from the departments of State, Justice and Defense, as well as the White House," said Rep. Ogden Reid, R-N.Y. "And it is our intention that their testimony will be open."

The probe was announced as congressional debate swelled over the Times series based on the Defense Department study.

The Justice Department obtained a temporary order restraining the Times from printing other articles taken from the 47-volume study and is seeking a permanent injunction.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said senators will conduct some type of probe into why information disclosed by the Times was withheld from Congress.

But the House subcommittee investigation is expected to center on the broader issue of how the government determines what information is to be made public.

Reid said the subcommittee is interested in "those government policies which withhold vital information from the American people, and violate the 1st Amendment guarantee of the right to know."

The only two Johnson administration figures to speak out since portions of the Pentagon papers were published say they knew nothing of the contents beforehand.

Former Defense Secretary Clark M. Clifford said one of the 15 known copies of the document has been under lock and key in his law office since it was handed to him.

He said he was told the study was under way after he replaced Robert S. McNamara as Pentagon chief. "I didn't pay much attention to it at that time, because I was more concerned with what was going on than what had happened in the past."

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., vice president at the time the report was prepared, said he didn't know of its existence until excerpts began appearing in the Times last Sunday.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said the Nixon administration's action against the Times amounts to censorship and added: "The publication could not conceivably damage American security interests."

PERSONAL FINANCE

By CARLTON SMITH

Many taxpayers undoubtedly missed a deduction they might have taken on returns filed in April, had they known they should have been keeping a record. The Treasury department ruling on credit card finance charges came only shortly before filing time.

But keep a record of these charges during 1971, and you may have a sizable addition to your deductions next year. The ruling, however, defines in considerable detail the conditions under which the charges can qualify as a deduction. In simple language, here are the rules, as interpreted by a major accounting firm, Lybrand, Ross Bros. & Montgomery.

Any charges made for the use of a card "must be stated both as a finance charge and as an annual percentage rate." The typical interest charge of 1.5 per cent a month, for example, is an annual rate of 18 per cent, and should be so identified on your statements.

A charge, to be treated as deductible interest, "may not include service charges, loan fees, credit investigation fees, etc." But what if your statement lumps some of these together with interest and you're billed for a single amount—some interest, and some not?

"If the interest portion of the finance charge cannot be determined," says Lybrand, "deductible interest will be considered equal to the lesser of 6 per cent of the average unpaid monthly balance, or the actual annual charge." It would seem that, if the interest is not billed separately, you're limited to 6 per cent as your deduction, even though the issuer of the card admits he's charging 18 per cent. You're allowed only "the lesser."

The bank credit cards now in widespread use make life simpler for the taxpayer. Participating merchants are generally charged a fee, which covers operating costs. Where that's the case, "the entire finance charge paid by the credit card holder is deductible as interest, provided that it is treated as interest by the bank," and with few exceptions it is. Lybrand reports that most bank card plans will come under the ruling.

Even the strongest of men can find it difficult to lift a mortgage.

DO-IT-YOURSELF

Tender Loving Care for Your Car

By MR. FIX

Ours is a nation on wheels and the way some of us treat our automobiles it's a wonder that it isn't a nation coming to a halt.

Now, not all of us are mechanics nor need we be. But like the fellow who forgets to check to see if an appliance is plugged in before calling a repairman there are certain things we forget to check for ourselves. There also are certain basic maintenance procedures that we all can do.

Remember to check your car before you travel—be it a full vacation or just a weekend trip. If it is time for a professional going over—get it done. No point in being stranded in strange territory later on.

Since modern autos need and get less service because of self-adjusting brakes and fewer oil changes, there are fewer opportunities for a trained mechanic to spot the beginning of trouble.

Check the condition of the fan belt yourself. There should be a play of a half-inch but no more than that. Look for signs of fraying. A loose belt will result in faulty generator operation and inefficient cooling. If the generator is not working at full capacity it will run down your battery.

Check the radiator. If water is rusty or filled with scum, flush out the radiator and replace with fresh water. Dirt can cause overheating.

The air passages in the radiator core often fill up with dirt, leaves and dead bugs. When you wash your car, take the time to direct a stream of water through the radiator core from the inside. That way the dirt will come out and not be sprayed

Q-At what point on the earth's surface are the days and nights always of equal length?
A-At the equator, 12 hours each.
Q-How did the lion come to be a symbol of resurrection?
A-In popular Eastern myth, the lion cub is supposedly always still-born, and is licked for three days by its sire until it comes to life; the lion, therefore, became a symbol of resurrection.

Pittsburgh 9-8 Over Montreal

Santo and Jim Hickman crashed two-run homers and knocked in three runs apiece in all as the Cubs stormed to a 13-0 lead after five innings and handed St. Louis its 10th setback in 11 games.

Associated Press Sports Writer
You can slam them against the ropes and rock them on their heels—but don't count out the Pittsburgh Pirates or San Francisco Giants while there's a bat left in their hands.

The Pirates took Montreal's best shots, including a grand-slam home run by John Bate-man, but still got in the last licks for an 11-inning 9-8 victory Friday night that protected their 3½-game lead in the National League East.

The Giants, floored by Bob Barton's grand slam in the top of the ninth inning, flailed back at San Diego with a five-run flurry in the bottom half to complete a 7-3, 10-9 doubleheader sweep and go 5½ games up in the West.

Dave Cash and Richie Hebner supplied the Pirates' counter-punch with successive ninth-inning homers to cap a tying four-run rally before Gene Clines lashed a pinch-triple in the 11th and Cash delivered the knockout blow with a single.

Dick Dietz' pinch-double with two out and the bases jammed in the ninth as San Francisco sent home two runs and the winner scored when center fielder Clarence Gaston let the hit skip past him for an error.

The New York Mets, second in the East, blanked Philadelphia 2-0 on Gary Gentry's two-hitter; Los Angeles' West Division runners-up trimmed Houston 5-4; Cincinnati downed Atlanta 6-1 and the Chicago Cubs bombed St. Louis 15-5 in other NL action.

In the American League, Baltimore beat the New York Yankees 6-4; Oakland whipped Milwaukee 6-2; Kansas City took California 6-1; Washington topped Boston 8-5; Cleveland drubbed Detroit 7-0 and Minnesota edged the Chicago White Sox 4-3.

Bateman's bases-loaded homer—first ever at Pittsburgh's Three Rivers Stadium—and a two-run wallop by Bob Bailey gave the Expos an 8-4 cushion going into the last of the ninth.

But Manny Sanguillen's double and a one-out single by Bill Mazeroski got one run across for the Pirates before Cash drilled his second homer of the season and Hebner followed with his seventh, sending the game into extra innings.

Clines tripled to open the Pirates' 11th against reliever Claude Raymond and held third as Mazeroski fled to short right field. Cash, low-bridged by a 1-2 fastball, picked himself off the Astroturf and smacked the next pitch into right for the winning hit.

Lost in the late-inning heroics was Pittsburgh slugger Willie Stargell's 22nd homer—a two-run shot in the first.

Bobby Bonds stroked four of his seven hits, including his 16th homer, as the Giants breezed past San Diego in their twilight opener behind the six-hit pitching of Juan Marichal.

San Francisco struggled from behind in the second game to take a 5-4 lead into the ninth. But Nate Colbert hit a tying leadoff homer and the Padres filled the bases on Ollie Brown's single, a walk and Gary Jestadt's safe bunt. Barton then unloaded them with his grand slam for a 9-5 San Diego lead.

Chris Speier launched the Giants' counter-attack with a double. Singles by Tito Fuentes, Bonds, Ken Henderson and Fran Healy sent in two runs, leaving the bases full with two out and setting the stage for Dietz.

Ken Singleton's two-run homer in the second inning decided the New York duel between Gentry and the Phils' Ken Reynolds, who left for a hitter in the seventh after yielding just two hits.

The Dodgers nailed their sixth victory in seven games on Wes Parker's two-run single in the seventh, which snapped a 3-1 tie.

Lee May drove in three runs with his 15th and 16th homers and Johnny Bench collected four hits, leading the Reds past Atlanta. Billy Williams, Ron

Brawl Erupts at Cleveland Ball Game

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

The price of beer was chopped to 10 cents in Milwaukee Friday night but the big news in Cleveland was free-for-all.

The Detroit Tigers and Cleveland Indians, after attacking each other with baseballs for most of the game, finally went at it with fists in the eighth inning of Cleveland's 7-0 victory in what umpire Jim Honochick called "the bloodiest fight on a baseball field I've seen in 23 years."

The brawl started when Cleveland's Ray Fosse was hit by a pitch and charged Tiger hurler Bill Denehy. When order was restored, Fosse and teammate Gomer Hodge were ejected, along with Detroit's Denehy, Willie Horton and Ike Brown. Fosse needed five stitches to close a cut on his hand and also was cut about the neck.

Elsewhere in the American League, Oakland spoiled Milwaukee's cut-rate beer night with a 6-2 triumph, Baltimore erased a four-run deficit and beat the New York Yankees 6-4 for Mike Cuellar's ninth straight win, Washington downed Boston 8-5, Kansas City trimmed California 6-1 and Minnesota edged the Chicago White Sox 4-3.

In the National League, Pittsburgh outslugged Montreal 9-8 in 11 innings, the New York Mets blanked Philadelphia 2-0, the Chicago Cubs blasted St. Louis 15-5, Cincinnati whipped Atlanta 6-1, Los Angeles shaded Houston 5-4 and San Francisco swept a doubleheader from San Diego 7-3 and 10-9.

Cleveland pitchers nailed three Tigers before Denehy clipped Fosse. Rich Hand hit Bill Freehan in the second inning, Ed Farmer nicked Jim Northrup in the sixth and Vince Colbert clipped Eddie Brinkman in the seventh. In addition, Horton and Cleveland's Chris Chambliss, who slammed a two-run triple in the fourth inning, had to avoid close pitches.

Denehy denied throwing at Fosse, but added: "I've never been with a manager, including Billy Martin, who told me to go after a hitter, but a pitcher has to protect his teammates and I'll even the score or go one ahead. Apparently they thought I was retaliating, but actually I was just trying to pitch Fosse tight."

Manager Alvin Dark of the Indians labeled Horton as the villain and said he would ask AL President Joe Cronin to take action against the Detroit outfielder for hitting pitcher Ray Lamb, who was "just standing there," according to Dark.

Chambliss followed the melee with a two-run homer. "I really wanted to hit one just to cool everybody off," he said. "The best way to get back at them is the way I did it. That hurts the most."

A crowd of 27,474 turned out for Milwaukee's 10-cent beer night but the A's spoiled the party with five runs in the third inning and Catfish Hunter coasted to his 10th victory. Hunter also stroked two run-scoring singles. Frank Tepedino homered for the Brewers.

Baltimore's Cuellar settled down and ran his record to 11-1 after falling behind 4-0 on third-inning New York homers by Horace Clarke and Bobby Murcer.

Yankee catcher Thurman Munson was knocked cold in a third-inning collision as Andy Etchebarren barreled home with the first of three Baltimore runs. The Orioles scored three more in the fifth after left fielder Ron Woods, a replacement for Roy White.

ROD LAVER, left, contends black tennis colleague Arthur Ashe, right, could have played in South Africa in 1970, apartheid notwithstanding, if Ashe "hadn't been so dominating about trying to get in."

Laver: Ashe 'Antagonized' South Africa

By IRA BERKOW
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) — "Arthur Ashe would be able to play in South Africa right now if he hadn't been so dominating about trying to get in," said Rod Laver.

Laver, the foremost tennis player in the world, made the comment in an exclusive interview here. Laver was in New York to promote his recent autobiography, "The Education of a Tennis Player" (published by Simon and Schuster).

Laver, Australian-born but now living in California, believes that Ashe, a black man, had antagonized South African officials when he was first denied a visa to play there in the 1970 South Africa Open. (South Africa's apartheid policy excluded most blacks from athletic participation with whites.)

"Arthur was understandably angry. He said that he would like to drop a bomb on Johannesburg (the town in which the South African Open is held)," said Laver.

"I don't think that was a very good thing to say. I know he didn't mean it literally, but I'm sure it didn't sit right with most South Africans. And don't forget, there are many white people in Johannesburg who have been working to have Ashe and other blacks allowed to participate in athletics."

Ball and Stance by Frank Beard

The old school of thought about positioning the ball in your stance was that the longer the shaft, the farther forward you played the ball. An 8-iron would be played back near the right foot. A driver would be played off the left foot.

The modern school of thought is to play all shots from the same position, usually toward the left foot.

My own theory is a sort of synthesis of the old and the new. I don't believe you can play everything off the same point, because the spot at which the club contacts the ground has to vary with the length of the club. But I do play everything from the center of my stance or left of it.

I just like to feel that my left arm is comfortably extended at address.

One method for determining where the ball should be in your stance is to take a practice swing, note where the divot starts—and then position the ball there.

Alex Johnson: Nobody's Angel

By IRA BERKOW
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Alex Johnson would spit in the eye of his executioner.

He holds to certain principles, regardless how fuzzy and self-destructive they might appear. For the third time this season, he was recently benched for what California Angels' manager Lefty Phillips termed lack of hustle: Johnson failed to run out a ground ball on which he was irrevocably out.

Establishment, Puritan-ethic baseball is not played that way. Appearances off make the man. Charley Hustles, however garish, are glorified. To wisely conserve energy is deemed unseemly. As in the Army, you must LOOK busy to pass muster.

Upon the first benching, Phillips called a team meeting excluding Johnson. He announced that Johnson would not be in left field that night. Forty-eight Angel hands applauded, it was reported. Subsequent benchings brought no cries of injustice from teammates.

"Some things he does," said Phillips, "make him susceptible. Especially when the club is going bad, like it has been. Nobody looks in the mirror and blames himself. So they look for a scapegoat, and Alex has brought that on himself."

Johnson can turn that around, too. He stood with arms resting on the back of the batting cage and talked into his wrist.

"If I were a reporter, I'd ask Alex Johnson, 'What would be some of the lack of communication between him and his ball club?'" said Johnson.

The answer? "Ignorance by the ball club," he said. He did not enlarge.

Yet he has had similar problems with the Phillies, the Cardinals and the Reds, all of whom traded him despite his resounding bat. Last season, he led the American League in hitting with a .329 average. This year he has been struggling to get up to .250, but that seems the least of his problems.

Johnson does not pretend to be a lower-case Angel, and communication on his part is a tenuous commodity, too. As when Johnson called to Fred Koenig, an Angel coach, "Hey, Koenig, am I in the lineup today?"

Nearby, Jerry Kenney of the Yankees, a friend of Johnson's, smiled incredulously. "Hey, A. J., you mean you don't know if you're in the lineup?"

"I don't waste my time with that," said A. J., in his arcane manner.

Lack of communication has cost Johnson money other than in fines. He told Kenney about his having to drive visiting relatives to Disneyland consistently. He said he had spent over $150 on them last year. "The tickets sure stacked up," he said. "Then I found out that ball players got free tickets."

Johnson disdains speaking with some fans (they boo), most teammates (whom he feels are white racists), umpires (who "bear grudges") and official scorers (vengeful and "stupid").

"I've been bitter ever since I learned I was black," Johnson has said. "The white-dominated society into which I was born, in which I grew up and in which I play is antiblack."

"I don't have time for hy-po-crisies," he adds.

What does he have time for? One thing, he said, was watching his diet, eating the right foods. Anything special? he was asked.

"No, I just have a habit of eating," he said.

One wondered whether Johnson ever questioned himself, questioned his actions.

"The last time I talked to myself I said I was right, but I don't have time to talk to myself all the time," he said. When was the last time he talked to himself? "This morning," he said.

Has the present situation made him lonely, laid him low? "That's a stupid question," he said. "I always feel the same—consistent." Even when you're not hitting? "I'm always hitting." Under .250? "I always feel I have the reserve, the energy, the confidence to take the upper-hand at the plate and hit as well as anybody whenever I want to."

Finally, he was asked if he has ever admired anybody, ever wanted to be like anybody?

"I've admired a million people," he said, "but I've never wanted to be anybody but Alex Johnson."

Bill Cozzi: The Ex-Greatest One-Legged Athlete in World

By IRA BERKOW
NEA Sports Editor

CHICAGO — (NEA) — About the only thing athletic that Leggy Cozzi does any more is hustle across a street to beat a yellowing light. He has cut down considerably on that, too, because, like the average man of 64, he is, as he says, "a little out of condition." Today, no one would write that he is the greatest one-legged athlete in the world.

William O. Cozzi discouraged such a story 45 years ago, when it was suggested by a Chicago Tribune newspaperman. Leggy was a local baseball and softball star, a 112-pound amateur boxing champion, a swimmer, a basketball standout who once scored 26 points in an AAU championship game at the Chicago Stadium (in a day when 26 points was hot stuff for an entire team), a pole vaulter and a high jumper who, when he was a 5-foot-2 lad (he's now 5-6), won a medal by high-jumping 5-5 ("Hop, jump, skip and a bi-ig hop and over the bar").

He discouraged the story about his being the greatest one-legged athlete in existence because he wanted no pity or sympathy. There were broads and stuff, he adds, with which he felt he would have been handicapped had they known he was a cripple.

"But now," he said, "I realize that my story might help a lot of crippled kids all over the world."

William O. Cozzi, still bright-eyed and only somewhat plump, is now a Chicago precinct captain with a political job in Cook County. But he remains "Leggy." He has carried that nickname ever since he was five years old when, in front of Hull House, he suddenly wrenched himself free from his mother's hand, darted into the street and was run over by a trolley car. An immediate operation was necessary, and his left leg was amputated five inches below the knee to save his life.

"LEGGY" COZZI was a 12-year-old newspaper boy when the Chicago Tribune printed his picture in 1919, left. Today, at 64, he is no longer the greatest one-legged athlete in the world but he still doesn't consider himself handicapped.

He began playing ball in an empty lot in the neighborhood. "I saw all the other kids playing and, gee, I wanted to play, too," he said at breakfast recently. He played with a crutch in those days. In the infield, he'd run a few steps with the crutch, then toss it aside to field the ball, drop to his stump and nail the runner at first. At bat, he'd hit and hobble around the bases with his crutch.

"I remember that truck drivers would stop and get out and watch, and other people would come around. Before you knew it, there were so many people you couldn't walk on the sidewalk," recalls Leggy. "It's really nothing to brag about. I wasn't so good in those days. I was just unique."

He was also unusual in that he was helping to support his family at age 10. His father had died and his mother and three brothers and sister were in tough times. So Leggy began selling chewing gum and newspapers in the Loop. "Every night I'd come home and give my ma a handful of coins," said Leggy.

If he seemed liked a Horatio Alger hero to some, it did not touch a lady from the Juvenile Protective Agency (JPA), quite that way. A yellowed 1917 clipping from the Chicago Tribune notes "Little Willie Cozzi, a little one-legged, pale-faced boy peddler, whose thin limbs seemed benumbed by the icy wintry blasts from the lake," was being sought by the JPA because that lady thought urchins should be home doing their tables.

The story added that "poor Willie" had disappeared. But he turned up, again in the newspapers, a few years later. He was named valedictorian of his graduating class at the Jesse Spaulding School for Crippled Children.

Meanwhile, if the JPA needed investigative help, they should have enlisted the mayor, Big Bill Thompson, who was one of Leggy's big tipplers. "He'd always give me a quarter for a two-cent paper," said Leggy.

Another customer and important politician, George Brennan, who also had one leg, bought Leggy his first artificial leg, a crude wooden appendage shaped from a tree. Leggy was able to wear pants and shoes to cover it up. But then his newspaper sales dropped. So he took off the artificial leg when he went to work.

Leggy also had to take it off when he went swimming, and in later years that was a source of great embarrassment for him. "I'd go to the 12th Street beach with the guys. But it would hurt me because people would stare, especially the girls," he said. "So I took to going swimming at night."

But he could hide the leg in athletics: he always wore baseball knickers and baseball stockings. "The more I wore the artificial leg, the more I got used to it, the faster and faster and better and better I got. Soon, I could run almost as fast as the average guy." Despite himself, word got around about Leggy. "I'm not bragging," he said, "but people came from all over and marveled."

"I was always a little guy, though. That was the big thing that was against me."
